CANTONESE STYLES FOR SEXES

Sumptuary Laws For Coming Summer :

SEVERE SIMPLICITY. WILL BE ENFORCED

From Our Own Correspondent! Canton, To-day. Latest West End fashions for ladles or "Au Chic Parisien" will have no effect on women in Canton this summer, nor will Eugene' waves or marcelling be popular here in the coming

The reason is that the Kwangtung Political Research Institute has set the style and fashion for both ladies' and gentlemen's wear. As a first step, the Institute recommends the use of native materials for the dresses of both sexes.

Long gowns, according to the dictate of the Institute, must not be shorter than knee-length nor come below the ankle. Short coats or blouses should at least come down to the hips. (Continued on Page 11)

PRECARIOUS POSITION OF KUNMING

GOVERNMENT TROOPS NOT ENOUGH TO STEM RED ADVANCE

[From Our Own Correspondent]

Canton, To-day.

The towns and villages in Eastern Yunnan are being thoroughly looted by the Communists, who have been in occupation of Pingyee and Loping since Monday last. With only about two brigades at his disposal, General Lung Yun, the G.O.C. in Yunnan, has made no plans to drive out the Communists but is concentrating all efforts in safeguarding Yunnanfu, alias Kunming, the provincial capital.

Busy with looting, the Reds have not taken any precise direction yet. Loping is a strategic position. From there the Communists can march farther into Yunnan, return to Kweichow or peneirate Into Kwangsi. It is likely that the Red riff-raff will either attack Yunnanfu or proceed northward in the direction of Szechuen.

Some anxiety is felt among the foreign population in Yunnanfu. Most of them are missionaries of various denominations. In the event-of danger, they will be evacuated by rallway to Indo-China or by aeroplane to Kwangsi or elsewhere. Yunnan troops are good fighters but the invading ban-

"MUSIC IN THE AIR"-KING'S THEATRE

Loyal "fans" of Gloria Swanson, will have an opportunity of seeng her in her first, picture for many years, "Music In The Air," new showing at the King's Thea-

There are many splendid and authentic scenes of life in Bayaria; most of the costumes worn were actually brought to Ameria for the film. Miss June Lang and Douglass Montgomery are attractive young lovers, and John Boles and Gloria Swanson are well easted in their respective roles.

Miss Swanson takes the part of bored actress and Boles is seen s an eccentric and temperamental playwright. Music is the highlight of the picture and was written by the famous Jerome Kern-Oscar Hammerstein combination.

> DAVID COPPERFIELD"-QUEEN'S THEATRE

Dickens lovers will be flocking to the Queen's Theatre to-day, where "David Copperfield" one of the greatest stories ever written, and equally great on the screen, will be showing.

Never before has such a magnificient cast been assembled. The youthful David is beautifully acted by Freddie Bartholomew, and David "grown up" by the inimitable Frank Lawton. The most unusual feature of the film is the casting of that firmly established humourist, Roland Young, as the hand-rubbing Uriah Heep.

Edna Mac Oliver will win many more admirers with her portrayal of the terrifying but lovable "Aun-

PRENTICE CUP SHOULD BE DECIDED ON SHOTS

INTEREST MUST BE MAINTAINED

(By "Skip")

THE bowling season which opens to-day must bring with it happy memories of other days, when able exponents of the game such as Gow, Wotherspoon, Hamilton, and Ferguson, not only upheld the prestige of this Colony, when the occasion arose, but found time to show budding enthusiasts how to throw their bowls, and encouraged them in the rudiments of the game.

The "Big Four," Russell, Bond, Gerrard, and Harvey, were also players of this type, and they were responsible for the Interport matches being inaugurated in 1918. They took a short holiday in Shanghai, challenged that port, but were defeated by 30 shots to 11. The following year, however Hong Kong were revenged when they defeated a team from Shanghai here by 27 shots to 13:

The match was played at the Bowling Green and Hong Kong was represented by Ferguson, skip, Wotherspoon; Gow, and W. Gerrard. Never was a finer exposition of the game seen, Hong Kong excelled, with Gow the star performer, and, although the Shanghai rink played excellent bowls, they could not match the cuming and deadly bowling demonstrated by the Colony four. Since that year the Interport matches have continued, odd years in Hong Kong and even years in Shanghai. Each port won on its own ground until 1928, and at that time very few considered, it possible for any Hong Kong four to win in Shanghai.

A Pleasant Surprise

When a rink comprising R. Walskip Ferguson, Lapsley and W. Gerrard lost by 16 shots, there did not seem much hope for the team which Holland captained that year. However, much to the surprise of all, a rink skipped by Holland with Brown, Grimmitt, and Laing playing before him, successfully defeated the Shanghai crack team. "Hong Kong were able to participate in the Games in England because there happened to be several bowlers on leave at the time, but will the Colony be represented in South Africa in 1938?"

"One of the many solutions to this problem would be for the ten Lawn Bowls Clubs in the Colony to subscribe $100 a season towards a fund which could later be utilised to make up for the difference in passage money for players who wanted to participate in the Games, and who were able to divert their Home leave passage via South Africa, spending two weeks at the lat-

The climatic conditions also play to win the Hong Kong Cricket very large part in howls at home, for during the summer months one can commence a game at 8.30 p.m., and play for an hour or two, whereas Colony and Colonial bowlers have been compelled to be conten with a mere hour's play after of fice hours.

I will deal first with Golden Miller. He lay well up in the first half-mile, and then, when Castle Irwell took a clear lead after jumping Becher's, Wilson took him into second place.

He was then jumping with his usual ease and appeared to be going well. He cleared the plain fence after the Canal turn and the more formidable Valentine's, but at the fence after that, act cording to Wilson, he stuck his toes in made no effort to jump and threw his jockey over his head,

SHARE MARKET Weekly Report

Hong Kong April 27th, 1935. Megars. G. A. Harriman and Co's weekly share report and market review issued at noon on Saturday

The share market has experienced another week of depression principally due to the sharp rise in exchange. Prices in many instances eased off considerably, with a few stocks touching . new levels. Investment issues uled much easier with Hong Kong Electrics done at $62/641/4 and Manager. Telephones (old) at $211/2. Hong Kong Trams again touched a new low record of $131/2. Dairy Farms dropped to a selling rate of $161/4. With the exception of Cements which were at one time marked. up to $1.90 closing with sellers at $1.70, minor issues were generally casier. Hotels, after having been transacted at $4.60, receded to a selling rate of $4.30. China Lights opened with sales at $91/2, but fell laway to $9 at the close. Watsons came to business at $3.50. On account of the rise in exchange,

Sterling counters were very much easier. Unions changed hands at $375 and Hong Kong Banks were rather weak around $970. The tone of the market at the close is easy Business during the week has been done at the following prices:

Unions $375 .--Canton Insurances $215 .-H.K. Electrics $63.-/641/4. " Telephones (old) $211/2. Hotels $4.60. Lights $9.30/91/2. H.K. Trams $181/2/141/4. Cements (converted) $7.40. Bank of E. Traders Keep Watch On Silver Policy

PROFIT-TAKING EXPECTED IN ABSENCE OF RISE

In their market report, Messra. S. E. Levy and Company, correspondents for Messra. White Weld and Company, New York, state:-

"Stocks: Metal stocks comprised the major part of to-day's trading. In the absence of a rise in London silver prices, we expect heavy profit taking in this group, which would undoubtedly spread to the balance of the List. Total busi-; ness: 1,520,000 shares.

Traders are carefully watching the immediate Government silver policy. A broadening of inflationary interpretation of rising silver prices is beginning to influence sentiment on the part of commodity traders.

"Flash: The American Railway Association estimates carloadings at 611,000 cars, an increase of 19,000 cars from the corresponding period [Branch of The Mother Church, of last year."

The Nicest wayWith the Tasty Meatless
Luncheon And The

HERE are some novel and nourishing recipes that you might try as a change from meat in the hot weather, and a change from fish on Friday,

Spinach Patties
INGREDIENTS. — 12 oz. McDougall's self-raising flour, 6 oz. lard or margarine, 1 1/2

pepper, salt, nutmey, 1 oz.
cream, 1 egg.

Method. — Make the flour and fat into flaky pastry, cut out circles with a cutter or tumbler, and in those smaller circles with a wineglass or smaller cutter, leaving a narrow ring of pastry.
Bake patties and rings. Cook the spinach with ¼ cupful water, and when quite tender drain well, and rub through a sieve. Mix the puree with the butter, seasoning, grate or nutmeg, cream, and rub through a sieve. Mix the puree with the butter, season-ing, grate or nutmeg, cream, and the egg hard-boiled and chopped. Heat this up without boiling, and pile into the hot patty cases, with the pastry rings on top.

Baked Eggs in Ramekins

INGREDIENTS. — Small tin of anded corn, 6 eggs, pepper and salt.

Method.—Butter some individual ramekin dishes and divide the sweet corn among them—it is better heated first. Now whip up the egg whites very stiffly with a pinch of salt. Unless you have large ramekins, four whites would do: Put some of this frothed white into each ramekin over the sweet corn, and then gently slide a yolk into the middle of each. Sprinkle with a pinch of pepper and salt, cover the yolk with a small pat of butter and bake in a slow oven till set.

Stuffed Dates On Lettuce
INGREDIENTS. — required: Lettuce, watercress, tomatoes, dates, cream cheese, walnuts.

Line the required number of individual salad dishes with crisp lettuce leaves, and over this put a good layer of watercress. Add a few slices of firm tomato, Remove the stones from the dates and stuff them with cream cheese. Add them to the foundation of green ingredients, and over all sprinkle a liberal helping of chopped walnuts.

Serve with salad dressing to taste.
Shredded Cabbage

Here is a nutritious and interesting vegetable salad. Take the heart only of a small cabbage, shred it as finely as possible. Shred also a good Spanish onion, having removed the outer skins. Add a few young carrots cut into very small pieces.

Mix lightly together, pile in a dish, decorate with slices of tomato and boiled beetroot, and cover the whole with a thick sprinkling of ground nuts.

THE BEST SIMPLE SWEET

Of all the simple sweets compotes of fresh fruit are the best. Nearly all fruits can be used, and this is all the more useful since fruit that has been packed and arrived imperfect or not quite ripe can be served as a delicious dish. Fruit to be eaten raw must be perfect, but alas, we who are forced to rely almost entirely on imported fruit cannot reach for the perfect fig or peach still warm. from the sun. But don't be too discouraged—try a compote.

Compotes are always prepared in the same way. The fruits are whole or cut in half, peeled and cooked slowly in water covering them; sweetened with a little sugar and flavoured with a vanilla pod. When they are soft, which is easily ascertained by pricking them with a sharp knife; you leave them to cool in the water and serve them as they are, with or without cream

You can also, leaving them in half the water, add sugar to the other half, reduce this to a syrup, and pour the syrup when tepid over the fruit (well drained) in the serving dish.

You can further make it more elaborate still by adding to the water when reduced, a little red wine or port; cook one minute more and pour over the fruit.

As flavourings, vanilla pods, cinnamon or lemon peel can be used.
The fruit should be of the eating, not the cooking kind. Quite cheap eating pears, for instance, make a very good compote while quite good cooking apples would make a bad one, since you could only correct the sharpness of the fruit by adding sugar in your plate.
This should not be done with a compote, which must be sweet enough when served.
RECIPES

Compote of Bananas

Peel the bananas and poach them in water and sugar. Cook five or six minutes only: Reduce half the liquid to a syrup, flavour with a little rum and pour over the bananas in the serving dish.

Choose a sound pineapple, peel it and remove the core, cut it in slices and cook these as described above, but add to the water the juice obtained in cutting the fruit. If you want an extra flavouring Kirschwasser or Maraschino are the best. This can also be made with preserved pineapple. In both cases a great deal of sugar is re-

Compote of Pears Dijonnaise

Peel and poach the pears as before and leave them to cool in half the liquid, add to the rest a tablespoonful of black current jelly. Reduce to a thick syrup.

Pour over the pears cut in halves in the serving dish a little of the tepid syrup, doing this several times so that the pears are well coated with it. Dispose around the pears a border of black currant jelly finely chopped and sprinkle over the pears chopped grilled almonds.

In summer time fresh blackcurrants are used, mixed with raspberries to make a purce over which you dispose your pears. Compote of Chestnuts Roast very carefully some chestnuts, peel them and cook them again in a pan with water and sugar (the proportions to be a quarter of a pound of sugar to half a tumbler of water). Cook slowly till the chestnuts are well coated with syrup. Remove them and dispose them in a dish. Add a squeeze of lemon, sprinkle with sugar and serve.

Cake Tine.—The greasing of cake tins and ple dishes is rather a messy business and one which takes place most days . of the week. To avoid the stickiness usually involved, the following simple method is a good one to adopt. Keep a small jar of lard in the kitchen and, when tins have to be greased, place the jar near the fire or stove for a few minutes. The lard will quickly become liquid and can be applied to the tins by means of a brush. This method is quick, economical, and effec-

Those Mice!—A rough and ready, but very effective way of getting rid of mice is to soak old rags in a little carbolic acid and press them into the holes or spaces to destroy the pests.

Zow DIET

Benjamin Franklin's Health Rules

RANKLIN, scientist and philosopher, made a pronounced artistic and financial success of his life. He evolved and practised a doctrine of health that we" might call to-day a set of fundamental simple truths. You might be interested in what this man of the early eighteenth century had to say on the subject of health and long life; for he stresses just the very facts we are concerned with to-day in the planning of a balanced diet.

Eat and drink such an exact quantity as the constitution of the body allows of, in reference to the services of the mind.

Excess in all things whatever, as well as in meat and drink, is also to be avoided.

The measure of food ought to be (as much as possible) exactly proportionate to the quality and condition of the stomach, because

A greater quantity of some things may be eaten than of others, some being lighter of digestion than others.

Wouldst thou enjoy long life, a healthy body, and a vigorous mind? Labour in the first place to bring thine appetite in subjection to reason

If thou eatest so much as makes thee unfit for study, or other business, thou exceedest the due measure.

If thou art dull and heavy after eating, it is a sure sign that thou hast exceeded the due measure; for meat and drink ought to refresh the body, and make it cheerful and not to dull and oppress it.

If thou findest these ill symptoms, consider whether too much meat or too little drink occasions it, or both, and abate by little and little, till thou findest the inconvenience removed.

Keep out of the sight of feasts and banquets as much as may be; for 'tis more difficult to refrain from good cheer when it's present than from the desire of it when it is away; the like you may observe in the objects of all the other senses.

A temperate diet frees from disease; such are seldom ill, but if they are surprised with sickness, they bear it better and recover sooner; for most distempers have their origin from repletion.

And to these we may add the following written by a doctor of to-day:

Do not drink with your meals. If thirsty drink one hour before meals or three hours after meals. Do not drink tea, coffee or alchelic beverages. Do not drink anything too hot or too cold. Do not eat meat. Do not eat when you are tired, excited, angry. Do not cat fried or greasy food, nor fresh or white bread. Avoid condiments, Rat slowly, masticate your food well. Rest before and after your meals as long as possible.

line, where they are attached to necklets of material or bouquets. of flowers, are new and charming. These are especially successful in gowns of flowered taffets trimmed with pastel organdie.

A new trimming for the exotic atraw hats is bunches of liny tomatoes garnished with unshelled green peas, or miniature apples made of red feathers! But for those of you who dislike extremes, you're still quite safe with flowers under your brim or at the back of your straw toque. Flowera, indeed, are everywhere. Florists are outdoing themselves in creating new arrangements. Soft clusters are worn with the picture frock and there is an eye for colour combinations such as the mimosa and violet spray. Little, bracelets, of violets are a smart and different addition tothe evening ensemble. Yes, regardless of age, violets are the .choice, Artificial posies also demand attention. Deep purplish red carnations, or gay boutonnieres of daisies, sweet peas or pansies go, hand in hand with . the new flower-printed hankies, And there are actually artificial carnations and gardenias, that smell like the flowers!

Hairdressing fashions have certainly influenced the evening mode. The soft neck drapery makes a hair covering when you step out to find it taxi-esh at a draughty corner. The sideway swirl coiffure drapes the sape of the neck and lends itself, to the little clips, the posies, and the combs of coloured enamel that look so well. Puffy curls climbing from the 'ear' tip' to the crown of the head belong to an evening coiffure and are perhaps more fascinating than any marble prototype of ringlets. The arrangement is asymmetrical and hence multiplies the interest of the face by suggesting a problematic personulity, the face appearing quite different according to the aspect from which it is viewed. Another arrangement bunches the hair in the nupe of the neck and has the effect of defining the contour of a ... well-shaped head, and of framing it with the face and setting these on the pedestal formed by the neck and shoulders.

them to be "the finest Sonnets since Shakespeare."

Fifteen years after their mar-riage Elizabeth died unexpectedly. No foreknowledge of death spoiled their last hours together. Browning wrote:

."It was the most perfect expression of her love to me within my whole knowledge of her-always smilingly, happily, and with a face like a girl's—and in a few minutes, she died in my arms; her head on my cheek. Her last word when I asked 'How 'do you feel?'-Beautiful."

There is nothing that can do more to bring out the interesting lines of the face than a clever hair arrangement. And the modern coiffures are a triumph in individuality. No longer is it necessary to have regular features, for any irregular features can be modified to hold, great charm.

The summer's new printed silks are interesting and lovely. Very often they are printed with flags -the Silver Jubilee motif-or again with birds, leaves, moons, suns, and old-fashioned flowers. But of all fascinations, perhaps the summer hosiery is greatest. "There is a new ringless stocking in a coppery shade for brown or tan ensembles and an off-blue colour for the blue costume. This off-blue is tinged with grey and gives a flattering effect to the leg. Elegance and the prevailing femininity are introduced in an exquisite one thread stocking. A new stocking for afternoon wear is in a very small mesh and is especially woven to cling to the leg. It comes' in leading shades to combine with colours in shoes,

. No more original designs have, appeared than those of the new handbags. The materials are calf and pigskin, pin seal and even saddle leather. One very distinctive large envelope-style bag in natural saddle-leather has a pony's bit combined with leather for a handle. As a happy compliment is a leather belt whose buckle is also a pony's bit; this can be conveniently snapped on and off and used on other beltings for a change.

"One roomy pin-seal handbag has an unusual shape. Two broad strips of the leather, join in such a fashion as to make the bottom of the hag a square, with inverted pleats at the side. The closing is a zipper fastening ending in a short bracelet handle.

Pigskin bags come not only in natural colour, but also in many of the Summer shades. Two oval flaps, one on top of the other, the small one continuing up to form the handle and the larger one unsnapping to reveal a roomy pocket, give the new "longer-than-wide" model an air of outstanding smartness.

The newest vanity case hangs from the wrist like a large golden Easter egg, while fans look like mirrors, circular, with transparrent cellophane handles.

Grow Your Name In Mustard And Cress

A your garden is to grow your own name in mustard and cress. To do this you must prepare the soil well in a sunny, open situation. Dig the ground well and then finish off the surface with a rake, making the soil very fine and as level as possible.

The letters for the name should be rather big and about ten or twelve inches high. Each letter is traced out on the soil with a pointed stick and you should form it in double lines which are about two inches apart.

When you have finished the letters make a border—all round the name, also traced in double lines two inches apart. The seed is sown in between the lines in the letters and border, and it is important not to let any fall outside the lines.

As cress grows more slowly than mustard this should be sown first. Sow the seed rather thickly in the letters that form the name, and then cover with a little dusting of light, dry soil. Four days later the mustard seed is sown in exactly the same way in the border.

Unless the soil gets very dry no water will be needed, but if the ground seems like dust a little sprinkling should be given. If there are any thin or bare patches in letters or border re-sow these parts with more seed as soon as you notice them. Eventually you will have the name in letters of bright green with a pretty border all round.

If you have no plot of garden of your own you may grow your name just as well in a window box or in an ordinary wooden box filled with mould. In this case, of course, the letters will need to be much smaller.

The tiny laughter-wrinkles round the eyes may be quite attractive, but when they are the deeper kind that show you have been worrying they are most unbecoming. Regular use of a special muscle oil will gradually crase them. A few drops should be smoothed in each night before going to bed and again in the morning while dressing.

For those special occasions when

For those special occasions when you simply must look your best at a moment's notice, an anti-wrinkle cream applied and left on for ten minutes before making-up is wonderfully effective. This is not of any lasting use but its just like a conjuring trick and will tide you over for the moment.

For those faces with stubborn wrinkles one of the best things is an electrical treatment. To take it one lies back in a chair, while a tiny pad worked by electricity is drawn lightly over the skin beneath the eyes. Thus the muscles are enlivened and the skin toned up.

The, effect of a tiring day shows in the eyes more quickly than anywhere else. Pads of cotton wool soaked in skin tonic and placed over the closed lids relieve strain and help to banish the duliness which is so fatal to good looks. If you care to have a inxurious treatment you can give it to yourself at home by means of some special eye bandalettes. Composed of herbs, these are wonderfully strengthening to the eyes and quite miraculously brightening. The way to use them is to soak them in a a little hot milk, then place them over the eyes for about ten minutes. Lie back and, if possible, rest the mind at the same time. Then, when you take them off; dab both eyes gently with two pads of wool soaked in water

They exhibit the same silk and velour but they do not dare to dress for the street-that is to say undress only to a certain point. It is only in the salons the theatres where they are allowed to show a half of the neck without lacking decency; it would be monstrously indecent, in fact' impossible, to show the other half. Having been forced to cover their, neck they imagine they exhibit their body in the tight and clinging dresses, which makes their walk difficult and fatiguing, embarassing and awkward. They are obliged to sit on their side, almost on their hips.

Impressions

ENGLISH women may be clever, says Mr. Hsiung, but our Chinese women are wise and know how to keep young.

Mr. Hsing may be the one most qualified to speak, for he has lived in London and writes and speaks English fluently. He is the Chinese author and play-wright who has translated the well-known Chinese play "Lady Precious Stream" into English. He does, nevertheless, admire the English—all but their cooking. And strangely enough just this last week English papers proclaimed that English women were the world's worst cooks; while it is generally recognised that the Chinese woman is a marvellous cook. But Mr. Hsiung goes further. In answer to the question. "Is the Chinese woman not still where the civilised European woman was hundreds of years ago?" he says that she is where civilised European woman woman. might well wish herself. She is in the home. He thinks the Chinese woman keeps young and childlike because she does not use her brain too much. That does not mean; that she has not got a fine intelligence, Far from it. But she does not worry as the Western women do. She has no struggle; she has security. Thus it is that the Chinese woman in her early thirties will look as fresh as the European girl in her early. twentles. And what is more, she will be contented, not restless and doubting as we are.

His wisdom lies, he finds, in the fact that she does not compete in either business or sport with the man, for she knows that she could never be his equal. In her own sphere she is complete: she is ruler and supreme in the work for which she is best fitted and most useful in life.

I wonder what reply the modern Chinese woman would be tempted to make to Mr. Hsiung's article? He claims, for instance, that her position does not make her furious, or cause her to pen, indignant letters to her local newspaper. Did he see the headline a little while back which stated in large letters: "Chinese Women Protest." Feminist organisations not only in Shanghai but throughout China rose up in unanimous protest against the revised Chinese Criminal Code, which provided for punishment of married women by" imprisonment for misconduct, while carrying no corresponding penalty for a man in a similar situation.

Circular telegrams were sent to women's organisation throughout the country calling for a united opposition, delegations were sent direct to Nanking to protest, and a furor was stirred up in the press. The paper states that the storm of feminine protest came as something of a surprise to Nanking. For, throughout the centuries, women in China have been traditionally silent in public matters and have confined themselves to the affairs of the household.

But this latest incident goes to indicate some change of outlook in modern China.

There is a firm determination on the part of an influential section of Chinese women to take an important part in public affairs.

What The "Arbiter Elegantiarum" Of The Time Dictate

Only a few days separate us from the Silver Jubilee relebrations of the whole British world. Wires are buzzing, committees running to and fro arranging decorations and illuminations, and stamp collectors are queuing up outside the post-office to obtain the much coveted first cancellations. Magazines and newspapers are issuing special Silver Jubilee notwithstanding our youth, but we are carried back to an earlier time. The trend of fashion in dress, in social life, and to some extent even in politics, shows a tendency to recapture the romanticism of the late Victorian and Edwardian periods. For centuries Paris has supplied the inspiration for leaders of fashion all over the world. Although after the war, New York made a determined bid for her laurels, after a few years struggle the supremacy of Paris remains unquestionable. The best American fashion and society magazines maintain offices in Paris for the purpose of gathering their material. Now let us glance back and see what the "arbiter elegentiarum" of Paris 1890 dictate. They seem to have a flowery vocabulary when they describe the "dernier cri" is fashion, which one must find justified after a glance at the pictures of the time. "If you want the novel hat go to "Chez B.", says the fashion reporter," there are delicious headresses for those "elegantes" who want something out of the banality of fashion, but at the same time respecting good taste. There is a very beautiful hat in Italian straw shadowed by a cloud of plumes from lilac to jade green.

For the ladies leaving Paris, it is indispensable to take with them hats for the Autumn season. I saw an adorable hat in the shape of a golden ducal crown.

A Baudrillos in gold net falls to the nape and has gold stars on the front. An emerald green velour gives the most marvellous effect, all in Spanish style.

One cannot be well dressed without a corset which is well made, and to have a well made corset one must go to Leoty. One sees there nothing but the dainties of coquetry.

The elegant woman should wear a corset in rose cambric or an "Ophelia" ornamented with modern lace. A dream is the brocade corset with garlands and bouquets and a petticuat to match with wings of lace and pleated rushes in silk crepe. From Leoty we hear that a certain Parisian lady ordered twenty corsets. Is that not the peak of coquetry? . An order of twenty dresses is not such a great rarity, but twenty coracts remains recorded in the annals of the shop. I saw two, dresses one in green brocade with a boquet of roses and the trainlined in rose. In the front in a fold of green crepe de chine and the (Continued Over, Page)

The Baby Girl Of Eighteen Months

Tillis little girl enjoys three meals a day. She has no between-meal snacks, except prange juice before taking her mid-morning sleep, and a drink of water or prune juice on returning from her afternoon walk.

She has no foods fads; and happily has a splendid capacity for chewing. A certain amount of hard food is necessary, as it supplies the best way of maintaining a good digestion, strong teeth, and well-developed jaws.

Breakfast and tea-supper usually start with hard buttered brown bread toast, or one of the crisp breads. Just occasionally a little bread and butter is given at teatime, but this is always taken in sandwich form, and cut in small pieces which she can eat herself.

Like all other young people, she possesses a strong sense of the ridiculous and the imitative, carrying a ball in her mouth, for example, and crawling dogwise rapidly across the floor, with her chin in the air. She has only just begun to walk and she has a tendency; to turn her toes in, but we do not worry about this, as we know that its only a matter of balance and will be righted in time. If ankles are strong and 'legs straight, and firm, there is no cause for anxiety. Shoes, of course, are most important at this stage. She has only two pairs in her wardrobe at present, one for best and one to. wear every day, as her feet are altering and growing so fast. To wear shoes that are at all cramping in breadth or width is detrimental to the shape and comfort of the f.et, and holds up walking progress.

Now she is fond of constructive toys, and will stay still for a long while putting beads in and out of a box, or studying a picture book. If she has too many toys and begins to tire of them, we store them in large paper bags, having one of each type to a bag. All bags but one are put away, and as the interest in that one palls it will be replaced by another. But what she favours at the moment she loves to pack away in her toy-cupboard, while she has such a gentle touch that she fingers objects without harming them at all.

She is extremely supple, and is not at all troubled by any figure problems. Her clothing has always been loose and unrestricted, so beauty culture comes naturally, and graceful movements develop unknowingly.

Of course she cometimes benefits from a little wholesome neglect. If she gives way to her feelings and screams or whines, or tries to draw attention to herself, to leave her quite alone will soon right matters. Reasoning and scolding are useless and only serve to make her more agitated.

Her vocabulary is limited. though she does carry on quite an intelligent conversation in her own way, and understands what is said to her. All night long she sleeps, for she is free from indigestion and happily; occupied throughout her day. Occasionally she cries out in her sleep while cutting her double teeth. Teething is a painful process, often causing a sharp pain which brings an involuntary cry, but if feeding and management are correct, there should not be undue distress. Slipping an extra pillow in at bed-time is sometimes a help as it raises the

When she goes for her "carriage walk" in the afternoon she has plenty of fresh air, as her perambulator has not got too deep a coach, and it has no leather hood to hold back the used air. If it is summertime and very hot, a little green-lined canopy is raised for protection.

Your Legs Lovely

EGIN with your circulation, as that is essential to health and it helps to round off angles and mould the body into just the right proportions. First off all, as soon as you jump out of bed in the morning run and stand in front, of an open window, and breathe in and out slowly and deeply. As you breathe in lift" your arms above your head, making an ofen circular movement,"at the same time keeping your head up, chest out and shoulders back. Breathe out, and relax arms and body. Do this at least six times.

. Now if you happen to look down and it strikes you that you haven't got the loveliest of slender ankles, and still lovelier legs don't stop at sighing. There is a definite charm in attractive legs and ankles—and you know it. So make up your mind to do something about 'lt. Look quite critically at your legs and feet. If the actual bone structure is not large you can achieve miracles. On an average the ankles go with the general bone structure of the rest of the body. so there is probably not the slightest reason for you to be unhappy about the size of your ankles.

The great thing about most feet exercises is that they can be done at odd moments and if you haven't time to fit them in to your early morning programme there's no need to worry. You can do them in your bath, even in bed. But you must persevere with them if you want them to work wonders.

Are you sure you are walking properly? Far too many women do not —and no wonder they are so tired and irritable at the end of the day. Walking smoothly and lightly is just a matter of keeping your knees straight, throwing forward the whole of your legs from the hips and moving almost as though you were dancing.

An exercise that will soon loosen up your legs and encourage graceful curves is an exaggerated version of the goose-step. Try walking round the room, extending first your right and then your left arm level with your shoulders. Each time you move forward, throw up the corresponding leg, bringing it as near as possible to the height of your hand. Don't be discouraged if you do not succeed in touching it at first.

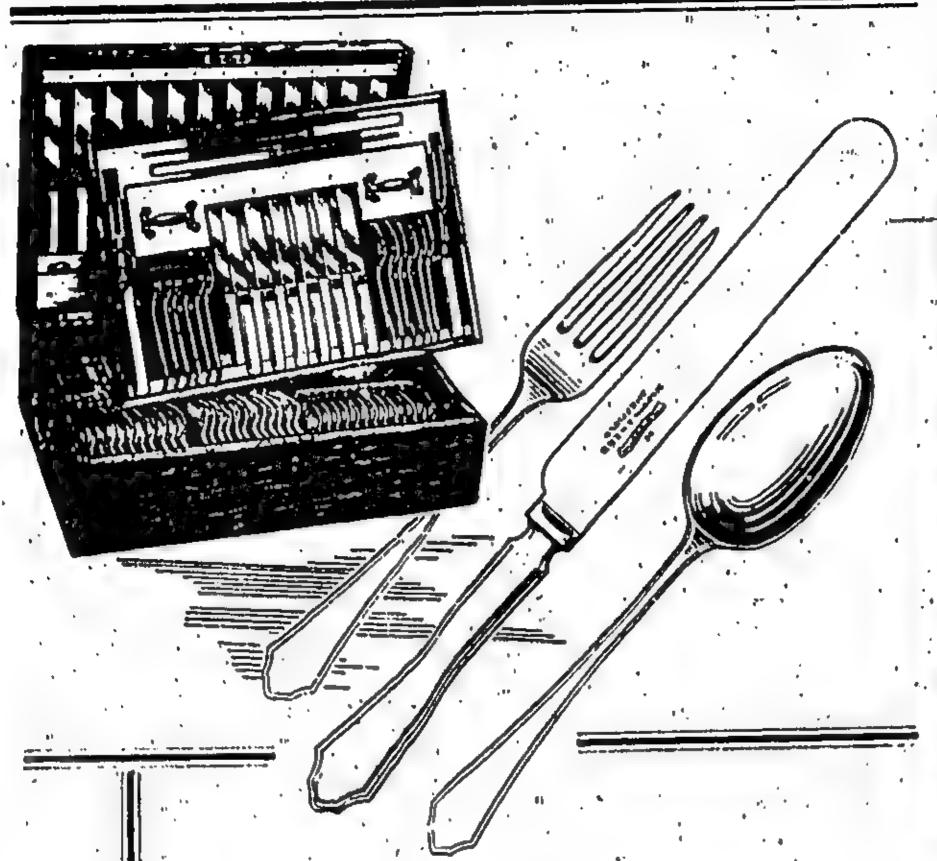

Proper breathing will improve your circulation.

Little Tricks

Brass Ornaments,—If polish of any kind is applied to lacquered brass it will turn black. It should merely be cleaned with a damp wash-leather and polished until dry with a soft fannel. Embossed brass should not be cleaned with powder, or polish either, as this gets into the engraving and goes hard there. As a rule it need only be washed with soapy water, dried, and rubbed up with a wash-leather; but if it is very dirty or at all tarnished, rub it all over with half a lemon before washing it. A slight coating, which renders it almost impervious to atmospheric conditions, can be put on brass ornaments by dissolving some beeswax in turpentine. After cleaning, rub it over with this liquid:

DERHAPS appreciation is really one of the fine arts, or perhaps most people do not allow themselves to appreciate things with which they are not very familiar. To create beautiful things is an art, and an experience enjoyed by only a few people in any age, but the appreciation of beautiful things should be as much a part of everyone's existence as breath-

Furniture, of all the expressions of art, the most intimate and lived with, can add vastly to our daily enjoyment if we are happy enough to possess, or clever enough to cultivate, the faculty of appreciation. There is a certain quality of aristocracy in fine furniture, and there have always been, and will be, people who naturally appreciate the charm which it adds to the beautiful interior.

Some of them are of the sensi-tive and perceptive type, decora-tors by instinct and by virtue of inherent good taste.

THE SILHOUETTE

I novelty in fashions this season to enable each woman to find just the frock to suit her. There are changes in the silhouette; some are sensational changes and some mere subtle alterations. The wide ekirt has arrived even for daytime use. Sometimes its a dashing flare given by a wide. circular skirt and mounted on a fitted hip yoke. Sometimes it is in more supple materials and styles and falls straight down. This smart fullness is introduced by fine knife pleats or tiny boxpleats all round, or by a shirring or smocking mounted on to a shallow hip.

Flaring afternoon and morning frocks are sometimes worn with shiny black patent Russian hoots. And a most alluring evening gown effect is the fitted bodice made entirly of soft feathers with a very full pleated skirt, trimmed with the same feathers at the hem.

Shoulders this season are often swallowed up by a new line, running in a long curve from the neck to the wrist. Sometimes bands of embroidery run from the neckline at the sides down over the shoulders and outside the sleeves to the elbow or wrist. Cape sleeves or wide drop shoulder armholes, lined with contrasting material and turned back over the shoulders to the neck-

Jehan and Mumtaz Mahal goes back to the sixteen hundreds, but to this day the most beautiful building in the world stands as a monument to their love. "Here in India at Agra, on the banks of the perfumed Jumna, there is an edifice of incomparable beauty, which holds enshrined within its cool and sculptured loveliness the poignant melody of a love song."

Under Shah Jehan the Mogul Empire attained its greatest prosperity. He erected splendid monument and the golden age of Indian architecture was born. The turning point in his life was his love for his favourite wife and Empress, the beautiful Mumtaz Mahal, whose name signifies "Crown of the Palace."

Of all the beautiful women in the Empire none could compare with Mumtaz Mehal, for she was more lovely than words can describe and there was nothing in his possession the Emperor, would not give her, but love is powerless against fate. Mumtaz Mahal became ill and died. The brokenhearted Shah Jehan determined to build for her the most beautiful tomb in the world, where he would also be buried when his time came to die, and the result is the Taj Mahal that most perfect domed, white marble building.

The twin tale of perfect love is that of Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning. Elizabeth was delicate, living the life of a recluse and an invalid. In her thirty-ninth year she met Browning for the first time and her whole life began to revolve around her friendship with the poet who typified the fighting spirit and radiated vitality.

The attraction was mutual and Browning frequently sent her gifts of flowers. He longed to marry her and soon overcame all her objections. They escaped the tyranny of Elizabeth's father, married secretly, and left for the Continent. At Pisa Browning read Elizabeth's "Sonnets From the Portuguese" for the first time. They were inspired by her own love story and Browning believed

But they must not be just ash trays. You are a home-proud woman; everything in your house has been selected to create a perfect harmony. So it is quite natural, that those ash-trays cannot be simply ash-trays; they must fit into the general scheme.

You went a round of the shops: You never realised before, how, difficult it is to find the type of ash-trays you fancy. There was one in blue with pink spots, but you hate pink spots. And the problem is much more complicated than it seems; as you intend using the ash-trays in the dining room, as well as in the living room. And the dining room is all in pale blue, the living room "cafe au lait." It must be a rolour which will harmonise in both -rooms. Porcelain wouldn't do; the boy loves to break porcelain. FASHION IN Mashions in dogs change with the years. What constitutes the right dog is hard to say but all at once one sees him everywhere and all around. Fortunately, although his shape may change, his inherent dogginess seems to remain, whether he be a Great Dane or the smallest Pekingese.

The cocker spaniel is on the crest of the wave just now, even though the cocker should have lots of exercise, including that in water, which most town-dwellers are unable to give him. But he's such a delightful companion! In fact, he's often been called "the merry little cocker." He was, and still should be the sportsman's dog, with a hardy constitution. His name comes from the woodcock, one of the game birds, for which shooting he was first used in England. As a result of in-heritance the cocker is easily trained to his work. It is this ability to learn that makes him so sdaptable. He has a quick intelligence, a placid disposition, and an almost pathetic, eagerness to please. Mrs. Browning's tribute

A really smart dog to-day is the long-haired Dachs, who suggests those maidens who once hardy, with sound constitution, he is the embodiment of pluck and well named the "Die-hard." He is a quite, dignified and understanding dog. And the lively little fox-terrier is a dog of all times. His popularity is well deserved. Alert and faithful as watch dog, he is, too, ever ready were neatly shingled and have now turned to semi-tidy, semilong hair about their shoulders. Then we have the extremely popular Scottish terrier. Rugged, for a romp, a walk, or a motor ride. Intelligent and easily taught, and more lively than the cocker or Scottie, he is a delightful companion for town or country.

BREWER'S have on sale the Atlantic Prize Biography:
"Grandmother Brown's Hundred Years" (1827-1927) by Harriet Connor Brown. This is an epic of American life in the early and later days of the Middle West. A fine picture of the New England character as it reacted two hundred years after the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers to a new environment.

This wonderful old woman's story is told in a simple and natural way. She was born in Burlington, Iowa, 1872. The first woman to win a position on the University paper and the first to win the Woodford Oratory Prize (and only one other woman has won it since!).

Her life has been amazingly active. She reported three national political conventions and did much newspaper work in Buffalo, New York and Washington, was literary partner of Wu Ting-Fang, Chinese Minister in 1900. Later she was an editorial clerk in the United States Geological Survey; and for four years collaborated with her husband in the preparation of reports on British Colonial civil pension

She is vitally interested in the various movements to abolish war. Her pamphlet "America Menaced by Militarism" obtained a wide circulation at the time of the Washington Disarmament Confer-

Bridge Notes

It was inevitable that a grand slam should be reached after South; with his four and a half honourtricks, heard North make a forcing takeout which guaranteed at least three and a half-more. As soon as South heard of North's adequate trump support in spades, with all four Aces placed by the four-five notrump convention. South knew that the combined hands contained eight spades headed by the A. K. Q. and since the chances are approximately two to one that five outstanding trumps will be divided three-two, there is no doubt but that the contract of seven spades was correct. West's double is the only factor imaginable which could have allowed the contract to be made. By no conceivable reasoning could South have failed to play the spade King as the first trump lead. But after the double, when West opened the four of clubs, South had only to look at his hand and the Dummy to see that there could be no card with which West might hope to win a trick, outside, of the trump suit With only four-trumps to the Jack West would surely fear the loss of his guarded honour through al finesse: so West obviously musty have had five trumps and East would be void.

After winning the club Ace on the first round, South, therefore, led a spade and, when West played low, finessed the eight. Since East showed out the subsequent play was simple. The Ace of hearts] constituted an entry to take a second spade finesse and a diamond lead to the Jack put South in again to draw West's remaining trumps At this point South needed to exercise some care lest he be blocked On the King of spades a small heart was thrown; on the Queen of spades, the last trump led, it was necessary for South to discard Dummy's diamond Ace. This unblocked the diamond suit and the King and Queen of diamonds could !! be led furnishing discards for two more of Dummy's hearts. His best strokes were his back- the King of hearts and King and hand, half-voiley and service, which, Queen of clubs in Dummy won the

DEATH

By Stephen Ross:

THE idea entered Gerald Hollister's mind early morning, when he awoke after a restless night believing that his uncle was dead. For a moments he lay in a state mingled relief and exaltation in which there was little grief for this departed relative. It was all with the famous English over. He considered it purpose. Also, but more laboriousenough to remind his nephew that ly, he discovered how it might be

He was quite pleased, as though he had found the answer to a riddle. But this was only the beginning. The drug had to be administered, and in circumstances that would make it sure beyond the least misgiving that no hint of suspicion would arise. It was a pretty problem. Plainly the murderer -Hollister himself, if he were fool enough-would have to be on hand to see that the stuff was taken, and to clean up any traces afterwards. On the other hand, it was equally evident that at the time of the death the murderer would have to be elsewhere, and with a cast-iron

Hollister though it over. For some weeks his mind fussed over it precisely as it might have fussed-over an awkward case. And one day at the telephone he stared at the receiver in his hand and suddenly gasped. He had it! He had solved the problem. He knew how could be done.

And there the matter should have ended, and would have, no doubt, if a crisis had not suddenly arisen in Hollster's affairs. He had not known that his wife had been playing contract at five shillings hundred and losing pretty steadily; or that the smart club she had recently joined had made it absolutely necessary for her to spend a quite inordinate amount of money on clothes,
